MINORITY LEADERS OF INFLUENCE: ATTORNEYS

Letter from the Publisher

We're pleased to share our Minority Leaders of Influence: Attorneys special edition.

Based on California Bar Association statistics, the percentage of overall attorneys practicing in California today, who also happen to be minorities, has been steadily growing since the 1970s. In 1974, for example, California's legal profession was made up of less than 5% minority practitioners, while last year that statistic reached 22%. While there is still much work to be done in terms of achieving a balance that reflects the diversity of our state's general population, the statistics continue to improve at a steady clip. The number of minority attorneys newly licensed by the bar last year, in fact, was a solid 47%, so the future looks bright in terms of increasing diversity.

There are some particularly stellar minority attorneys in the Los Angeles region who happen to be from a broad cultural spectrum.

For our coverage in this issue, we accepted nominations from our readers, the legal profession, and businesses throughout the region. From there, we narrowed down those considered to be particularly impactful on the legal scene, while serving as trusted advisors, along with maintaining the highest professional and ethical standards. We thank them all for their significant contributions to the Los Angeles business and legal community at large.

Congratulations to each of the superb legal professionals who made the class of 2021.

With respect and appreciation,

Josh Schimmels

State Bar of California's October 2020 Bar Exam Pass Results are Highest Since 2008

Earlier this month the State Bar released results of the October 2020 California Bar Exam and announced that 5,292 people (60.7 percent of applicants) passed the General Bar Exam. If those who passed satisfy all other requirements for admission, they will be eligible to be licensed by the State Bar to practice law in California. The October 2020 General Bar Exam pass rate is the highest in more than a decade, since July 2008.

"We heartily congratulate the 5,292 applicants who passed the General Bar Exam and the 323 candidates who passed the Attorneys' Exam in this tremendously challenging year. We are pleased that the first-ever remote bar exam will result in such a large influx of new attorneys at a time when more people than ever need legal help. We hope to welcome all those who passed to California's legal profession very soon," said Donna Hershkowitz, Interim Executive Director of the State Bar.

The October bar exam was unprecedented in several ways:

- It was administered to a near-record number of examinees, 9,301, the largest cohort since 2013.
- It was the first-ever to be administered online remotely. Of the total cohort, 8,920 took the exam online.
- It was the first exam graded under the new cut score of 1390, reduced from 1440 by the California Supreme Court on July 16, 2020.
- It was the first exam graded under a streamlined two-phase grading system, approved by the Committee of Bar Examiners in August 2020 to increase efficiency and shorten the grading timeline

The pass rate for the General Bar Exam exceeded expectations and predictions.

The Attorneys' Examination is open to those who have been admitted to the active practice of law and are in good standing for at least four years in another U.S. jurisdiction. Of the 578 attorneys who completed the Attorneys' Examination, 323 (55.9 percent) passed.

A pass list from the exam was published on the State Bar website on January 10, 2021. More detailed statistics about exam results will be available in four to six weeks on the State Bar website.

Successful applicants who satisfy all requirements for admission may take the Attorney's Oath individually or participate in admissions ceremonies held by their law school or others. Due to the current COVID-19 restrictions, the State Bar's Office of Admissions will not hold its typical admissions ceremonies and has posted instructions for individuals to be sworn in remotely.

If they have satisfied all other requirements, applicants are eligible to practice law in California after taking the Attorney's Oath and submitting their oath card to the State Bar. Approximately two weeks after forwarding the oath card to the State Bar, their names will appear on the agency's roll of licensed attorneys accessible on the State Bar website.

Closing the Justice Gap Working Group Holds First Public Meeting

A State Bar working group studying innovations that could increase access to justice for all Californians held its first public meeting Thursday, January 14, 2021. The State Bar’s Closing the Justice Gap Working Group, created by the Board of Trustees to carry on with important recommendations from the State Bar’s Task Force on Access Through Innovation of Legal Services (ATILS), is charged with:

- Investigating the development of a regulatory sandbox to foster experimentation with innovative systems for delivery of legal services in a manner that protects the public and allows data collection to assess the impact of possible regulatory changes governing the practice of law in California;
- Exploring amendments to the Rules of Professional Conduct regarding the ability of lawyers to share fees with nonlawyers as a way to promote collaboration, innovation, and investment in new delivery systems that lower costs and increase access to legal services;
- Examining the addition of rule 5.7 to the Rules of Professional Conduct addressing the delivery of nonlegal services by lawyers and businesses owned or affiliated with lawyers; and

- Considering amendments to the Certified Lawyer Referral Service statutes and Rules of the State Bar to enhance efforts to expand access to legal services.

The task force is chaired by Justice Alison M. Tucher, Associate Justice of the California Court of Appeal, First Appellate District, Division 4, in San Francisco.

“The immense challenges of the past year have only heightened the needs that this group’s work is intended to address,” said Justice Tucher. “Fortunately, meeting virtually enables us to bring together a truly remarkable working group, all of whom are volunteering their expertise to help California move forward. We are honored and excited to get started.”

The 20-member working group includes state, national, and international experts whose work focuses on the nexus of legal services, technology, and regulatory reform. It also includes members from important practitioner groups as well as members continuing from ATILS—who bring deep experience in California’s legal services community and expertise in legal ethics—to provide continuity with that foundational effort.

‘The immense challenges of the past year have only heightened the needs that this group’s work is intended to address. Fortunately, meeting virtually enables us to bring together a truly remarkable working group, all of whom are volunteering their expertise to help California move forward. We are honored and excited to get started.’

The agenda for the working group’s first meeting provided members with important background to set the stage for the in-depth discussions at future meetings. Working group members shared presentations on how consumers grapple with civil legal problems, how the United Kingdom has approached closing the justice gap, how Utah is using a regulatory sandbox to experiment with new types of legal businesses aimed at reducing the justice gap, and on several areas of legal ethics that the working group will probe.

The public meeting took place via Zoom, and an online recording will soon be made available at: board.calbar.ca.gov/Video.aspx. The working group is expected to submit its recommendations to the Board of Trustees no later than September 2022. Each recommendation is expected to balance the dual goals of public protection and increased access to justice.

The State Bar of California’s mission is to protect the public and includes the primary functions of licensing, regulation and discipline of attorneys; the advancement of the ethical and competent practice of law; and support of efforts for greater access to, and inclusion in, the legal system.

Diversity of California’s Legal Profession Continues to Improve

The State Bar’s “First Annual Report Card on the Diversity of California’s Legal Profession,” published last summer, provides baseline data on the diversity and workplace satisfaction of California’s attorney population across multiple demographic groups and employment sectors. The report brings into stark reality that despite significant growth in the proportion of attorneys who are women and people of color over the past 30 years, California’s attorney population remains far from reflective of the state’s diversity.

“The State Bar has committed to concrete objectives to help the profession move toward greater diversity and inclusion, and developing this annual Report Card is among them,” said Donna S. Hershkowitz, interim executive director of the State Bar. “By creating a snapshot in time based on the most inclusive data available, we provide a tool for accountability for ourselves and a stimulus for others to take action. We know that the lagging growth of diversity in the legal profession limits progress to eradicate inequities in the justice system. By working to diversify the profession, we do our part to address those inequities and help to shape the California we wish to see.”

- Among the Report Card’s key findings:
- White attorneys account for nearly 70 percent of California’s active licensed attorney population, while people of color constitute 60 percent of the state’s population.
 - Latinos are particularly underrepresented in California’s legal profession, accounting for a mere 7 percent of active attorneys.
 - In the last three decades, the proportion of new attorneys who are Asian or multiracial has more than tripled, and the proportion of new Latino attorneys has doubled, but the proportion of new attorneys who are Black has remained stagnant.

- Nearly three-quarters of California attorneys work in the private sector. Increasing the diversity of this sector alone will have a transformative impact on the profession.
- The government and nonprofit sectors, which together make up only 17 percent of the profession, are the most diverse, but women and people of color remain underrepresented at leadership levels in these sectors.
- Women, people of color, LGBTQIA+, and people with disabilities consistently report lower levels of satisfaction with workplace experiences, such as salary and opportunities for advancement and career development, than their white male counterparts.

The Report Card draws upon 2019 data from the State Bar’s groundbreaking online Attorney Census. Launched in January 2019, this ongoing voluntary annual survey captures key demographic information as well as information on employment, workplace environment, and issues key to recruitment, advancement, and retention. The Report Card’s analyses were based on responses by approximately 95,000 active attorneys.

The Report Card includes calls to action for employers and attorneys, with prompts and recommendations derived from a review of best practices in inclusion and diversity that the State Bar has engaged in over the course of the development of the Attorney Census and this Report Card. Similar recommendations were raised in a recent national study by the American Bar Association, Left Out and Left Behind: The Hurdles, Hassles, and Heartaches of Achieving Long-Term Legal Careers for Women of Color.

Two years ago, the State Bar commenced a tradition of annual diversity summits to bring leaders in key legal sectors together to discuss how to improve inclusion and diversity in the legal profession. Later this year, the State Bar plans two sector-specific summits—focusing on the private and nonprofit sectors. Early last year, the Board of Trustees committed to concrete objectives to advance diversity and inclusion within the legal profession.
